

Personality Disorders; Trends and thinking in practice

Starts on 24/06/2008

Ends on 24/06/2008

Category Conference

Location Manchester Conference Centre, Manchester

Information: The changing patterns in practice in managing personality disorder have resulted in a number of new initiatives, as well as endorsement of some of the traditional modes of practice. The complexity and diversity of people presenting to services has resulted in a number of innovative approaches across a spectrum of care. Some of these are evidenced at the conference. This conference will explore the work being done by a range of agencies from different settings and sectors. The day will be of particular interest to frontline workers and will contain a strong practical element.

The conference will focus on some innovative approaches to treatment and management of individuals with a personality disorder in a variety of settings. Delegates will:

- hear from practitioners and key stakeholders about good practice projects
- share experiences and good practice through interactive, in-depth seminars
- take part in networking opportunities to strengthen partnership work
- explore some of the issues facing service users and discuss treatment options.

Key themes

- Current trends and initiatives in treatment and management of individuals with personality disorder
- Dangerous severe personality disorder
- Prisons/probation
- Supporting people with personality disorder and dual diagnosis in the community
- Women
- Personality disorder and substance misuse
