

Druglink blog

The creation of the Druglink blog has a special significance for Druglink the magazine. The aim of Druglink has always been to provide an open forum for debate about drugs and drug related issues. This year marks the 20th anniversary of Druglink as a regular bi-monthly print publication.

However time and technology move on and DrugScope as an organisation is moving towards a much closer engagement with our membership and the wider drug sector. The Druglink blog is part of that process raising the bar on the level of debate and comment surrounding issues that affect us all.

So we will use the blog to comment more immediately on developments in the world of drugs, to raise awareness of drug issues and challenge some of the myths and misconceptions that surround the subject. But most importantly, we now have the space for you to express your views as well.

Access the blog here.

For more information please contact Harry Shapiro